ex-convict to be turned over to Virginia authorities to answer the charge of murdering Eva Roy. However, Rubin is wanted by the District authorities for an alleged assault recently on a six-year-old girl and as a fugitive from justice, and it is probable his return will be deferred until he is tried here.

During his examination last night by Inspector Grant of the local police department the prisoner related a thrilling story of the crime, giving minute details as to how he gagged and choked the girl, dragged her into the woods and tied her to a tree. When questioned as to other important facts in the case he seemed confused, which made the authorities doubt his story.

Rubin, during his examination, told of his escape from prison at Lorton on July 10, with Buford Tucker, his cellmate. At the time of his escape Rubin was serving a sentence of three years for breaking into the house of Bertha Donnelly, 1321 C street south-home in the woods, to escape detection by the police. He returned to Virginia, and early one morning claimed he met little Eva Roy attending a herd of cows. After talking with the girl for several minutes he asked for food. The girl started toward her home, he said, and fearing that she would report him, as he previously told her he was an escaped convict, he grabbed her by the hair. The girl lost her breath, he said, and began to choke. Then he grabbed her by the neck and she fell unconscious to the ground. When the girl died, he said, he dragged her body to nearby woods and tied it to a tree. During the struggle with the girl, he said, the lining was torn from his coat and his hands were scratched. Then he returned to Washington, after removing a bloody shirt, and bought a new suit at a 9th street group.
